

Conference Photos on Flickr website

Go to <https://www.flickr.com/photos/104494611@N02/sets/72157648942305689/> (should be able to use the left hand mouse button to Click on the above web address to go straight to the website).

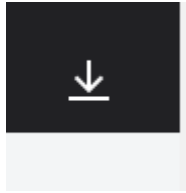

This will start up your internet browser and take you to the Conference Photo site on Flickr which should look like this:

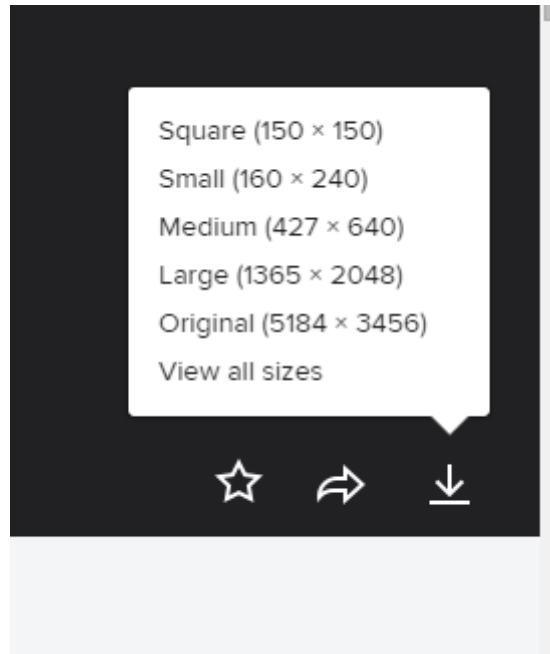

Click on a photo that you would like to download and the screen will change to this:

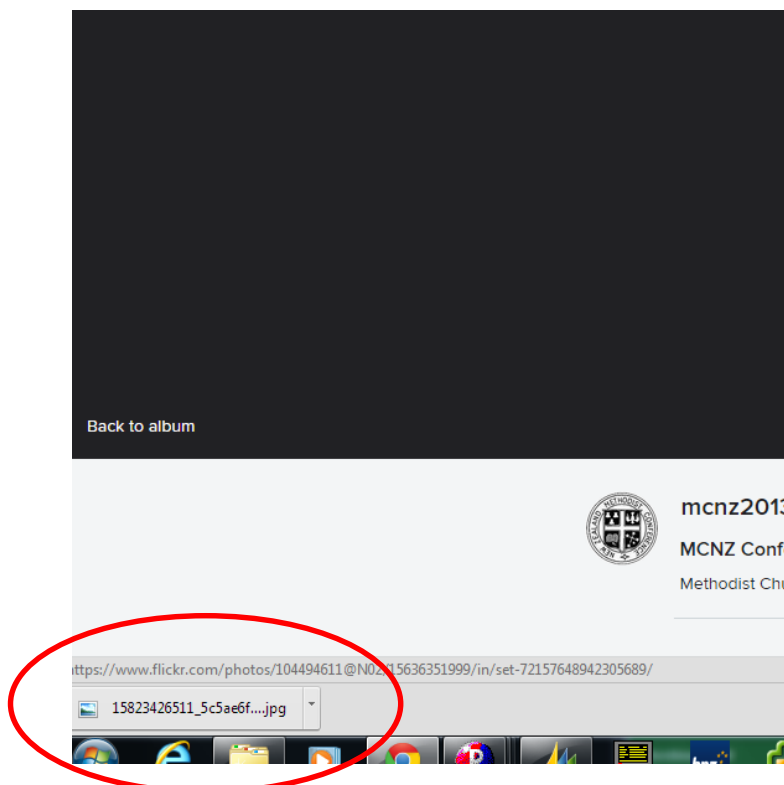

Click on the icon on the lower right hand side (circled above), which looks like this:

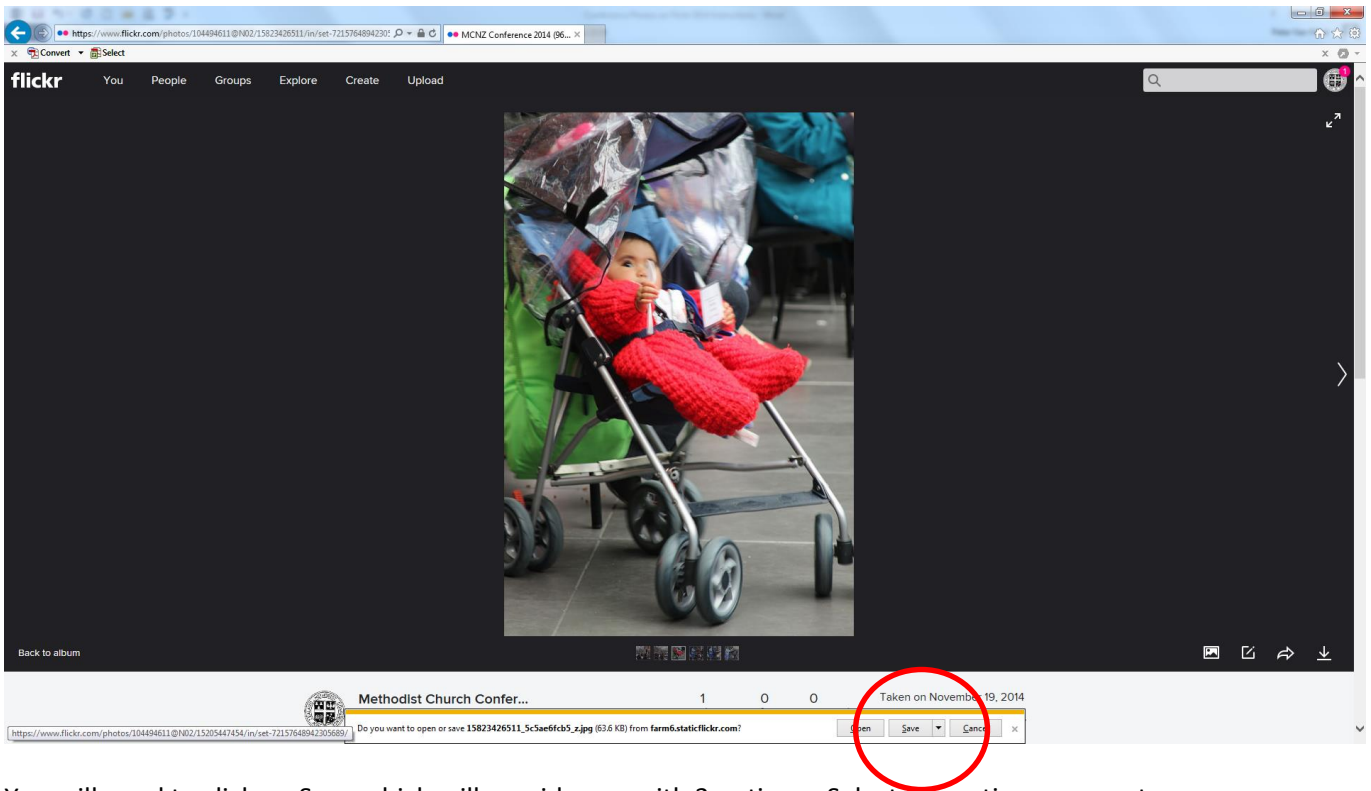

This brings up a menu. Click on one of the sizes. The size you want will depend on what you want to do with the photo. If you want to take the photo to a photo shop and have it printed out, then use the Original Size, if you want it for a PowerPoint then use either Medium or Large.

Once you have selected the size you want, the download will start and finish. In this case (I am using the internet browser called Chrome, if you are using a different internet/web browser this may be different and will also depend on what version of the internet browser you are using) the download will show on the bottom left hand corner of my screen as below:

For version 11 of Internet explorer it shows like this:

You will need to click on Save which will provide you with 3 options. Select the option you want.

For FireFox, the download shows on the upper right hand corner of the screen on one of the tool bars.

To open the photo, click on the down loaded photo and it will open it up on your computer.

Follow the same process for each photo you want to download.

You will also need to find out where on your computer the photos are being stored so you can copy them to a CD, DVD or memory stick for printing out later. My down loads go to a folder:

C:\Users\peterv.METHODIST\Downloads

However, each computer will be different but if you use Windows 7 or 8 then try the folder that looks something like C:\Users\peter\Downloads
